ABSTRACT

Parenting is the care that parent apply to their children. The age of the child is a very important factor in the parenting process. Children with an age range of 0-6 years are at the stage of personality and character development, so mothers are required to pay more careful attention to details in the process of parenting children aged 0-6. One of the factors that can influence the care of children 0-6 is parenting self-efficacy. One of the factors that influence the level of parenting self-efficacy is the support provided by the husband, the mother will feel more comfortable and reduce stress in caring for children when the husband provides support. The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship between husband support and parenting self-efficacy in mothers who have children aged 0-6 years in RW 14 Drawati Village. The method used is quantitative correlation. The population is mothers who have children aged 0-6 years in RW 14 Drawati Village as many as 40 respondents with sampling using totality sampling technique. The instruments used were husband support questionnaire and Parenting Sense of Competence Scale (PSOCS). The results of the study obtained a p-value of $0.003 < 0.05$, indicating that there is a relationship between husband's support and parenting self-efficacy in mothers who have children aged 0-6 years in RW 14 Drawati Village, and it can be concluded that in this study most of the husband's support was in the moderate category as many as 24 respondents (60.0%) and parenting self-efficacy in mothers was in the moderate category as many as 26 respondents (65.0%) and almost half of the husband's support for parenting self-efficacy was in the moderate category as many as (45.0%). Husband support greatly affects parenting self-efficacy. Support from husbands can show that the mother's parenting efforts are appreciated. Mothers feel satisfied with the support they receive from their husbands, and this satisfaction affects the mother's sense of success in parenting. The suggestion in this study is to carry out further research on husband support in the aspects of emotional support and appreciation support.
